

Dear Parent/Guardian,

It is vital for your student's success that you consider implementing a behavior plan, such as the one in my classroom, at your home. By doing so, the consequences used in my classroom will be more effective the more your child is exposed to it. This behavior plan helps prevent disruptions in the classroom that affect other students learning. Using a behavior plan can help make your child's behavior better at home if the consequences are consistent. Most importantly, it teaches them that their actions do have consequences and provides them with methods to learn how to control their emotions.

Below I have provided a basic template with instructions that I welcome you to implement or expand upon at your home. There is not one perfect way to construct a template, however, you might use the one provided to brainstorm and add to it. If you would like more information or assistance in creating your own template, please do not hesitate to contact me.
