

Dear Parents,

I would like to take this opportunity to talk to you about creating your own acceptable use policy for home use. An acceptable use policy is essentially the rules you expect your children to follow at home. Many of these rules are spoken and understood between parent and student, but its always good to have a written record of expectations and consequences. This way, you child will know exactly what will happen if they break these rules, and there is no misunderstanding. I would encourage having a specific section for each set of rules you expect your children to follow. I have created a template based off of the acceptable use policy implemented in my classroom should you choose to use it to make your own.

Best,

Kennedy Capps
