

How Can Padlet be Used in the Classroom

Kristen Stokes

1. One way I would use Padlet in my classroom is for my students to take notes and post them on their own boards. I think that this would be an easy and fun way for them to see what they have learned and use their own notetaking for studying and referring back to it when needed.
2. I could also use Padlet as an Exit Ticket in the classroom. Students would have to show what they learned today and also post any questions they may still have over the lesson. The students can answer those questions on Padlet and refer to it later.
3. Students can also create a gallery of QR codes they have collected over time. This would be the perfect place for them to store all of the ones they need to keep as well as any QR codes they found useful or fun that they want to include on a Padlet board.
4. Another way I thought students could use Padlet is to have them replace using a Poster board for a presentation and use a Padlet board instead. On Padlet they can post pictures, videos, links to websites to help their presentation and make it more interesting as well.
5. Students could also use Padlet as an About Me activity. They can post all sorts of pictures, videos, quotes, websites, etc. that they think would best introduce them to the class and we would have time set aside where we would look at everyone's boards and learn about them.
