

Padlet is an awesome online tool that I have had a lot of fun using! Some ways that I think I will use padlet in my classroom are by, creating a board for each subject and uploading all student assignments and resources for that subject to its board so parents will have access to it. I will also create a board for announcements where I will post the lunch menu, important date, information about class parties, and field trips etc.

Online Tools

What have you discovered about on-line tools?

I have discovered that there are way more online tools then I could have possibly imagined. I have also learned how impactful they can be and I hope that someday the parents of my students will see this too.

How can they enhance your lessons?

They can enhance lessons by opening up options that would not otherwise be available. For example, Kahoot is a big one that I think will greatly enhance my lessons. It is a wonderful way to informally assess your students and give you a brief idea, even mid lesson if you choose, to see how much information your students are grasping and if you need to change anything about the way you're going about teaching your lesson.

What do you like and dislike about them?

I like how useful online tools are and how easy they make things. What I don't like about online tools is that there is always a chance that there could be an internet issue on one end or the other, or some parents may not have the online access like the rest of them.
