

Michaela Moore

Online Tools

1. The tool I found named Pixton. This is a tool where the students can make their own cartoon charters. They can use this to be creative. They can also use to recreate different events in history to help them better understand them. I can also make my own for them to use to understand things like bullying and different classroom rules. This is one of the examples I have made. <https://www.pixton.com/>

2. Another tool I found tool called Edmodo. This is for teachers, parents, and students to stay connected. Students can communicate with each other and me. This is a tool that could help my shy students say what they want to without have to say it to their peers. This will allow me to find some lesson plans. This will allow me to grade their homework and allow their parents to watch their child's grades. <https://www.edmodo.com/>

3. The third tool I found is called Prezi. This is a tool that is a lot like google docs. It is a tool that can be used to make presentations with partners. This is something I can use to help monitor their progress on their work in real time. It updates in real time. I can also have an app where I can watch them while they work on their computer.

I learned a lot about all of the online tools that are out there. There are many tools that not only help my students but also help me as well. They enhance my lessons by giving me more opportunities to bring things to my students. My students can always have an opportunity to do things they would not get to do outside of my classroom. I want them to get to do things they would not get to do outside of the classroom.