

Special Education

Schools are a very important organization that help provide a structured education system, they also provide a well-structured special education system as well. By doing so the school also plays an important role in a child's psychological and mental growth. Schools can be a great model for children to learn responsibility and allow them to become hardworking individuals along with many other life time experiences that can be gained from schools. Special education can also be a wonderful tool for students who have a particular disability. Students cannot live in complete isolation from community life, even kids who go to school are bound to have different connections with other people who together form a society including children with special needs. Students play important roles in improving and strengthening society and so do children in the special education system. Schools provide organizations or clubs, and sports teams that are in themselves a small society. Public schools play a significant role in the general improvements to their communities, and they can help operate as a major platform for enhancing child welfare in the community. Besides the socialization, that a school would have it has many other significant education opportunities for all students.

To me I believe that special education gives all the ability to learn, regardless of their particular disabilities. Public education has changed from isolating special education students in separate classrooms in order to not to separate them from the classrooms and allowing more of a mainstream environment in a regular classroom and if not all day for at first part of the day. Special education is a broad term but by law the IDEA they have specially designed instruction that helps meet the unique needs of a child who have a disability. These services are used to provide school a systems and are free of charge. Being able to provide these types of services can help provide services in the classroom, at home, in the hospital and or an institution as well.

Learning disabilities can cover a wide spectrum of disorders that can range from mild to severe.

This can also include mental, physical, behavioral and emotional disabilities.

Special education is something near and dear to my heart because I was a student who has a learning disability. This program makes it possible for your child to achieve his or her academic success in a child's least restrictive environment despite their disability. This program allows specific programs or classes for your child, gives access to specialists, allows for modifications in the educational program in their curriculum and teaching methods that can be a help to the child. The special education department is a major key in helping children with a learning disability and give them the best learning environment for the child to be successful within the classroom.
