

My Philosophy of Education

I believe that the school system gives them a sense of stability. Schools give students schedules that are to be followed on a daily basis. Schools also give children responsibilities that would not be present in their life if education was not provided to them. This stability gives students a stable structure that may or may not have been provided to them without the school system. Schools also give students the opportunity to strengthen their knowledge. They have the chance to learn more about themselves, and they are able to develop a sense of respect for not only themselves but for the people around them.

In my opinion, it is very important to serve each individual student's educational needs as they should be served. Schools should provide each student with an individual education plan that best fits their needs. A plan for each student is an excellent effort if the school system wants to assure that they are serving all students that best benefits them. It is important to me, as a teacher, to be of assistance with each student reaching their maximum potential not only in the classroom, but in life as well.

I view students as educated people that need assistance in the world. Students are already smart. It is my job to show them what is important. Like teachers, students also have a huge role in his/her education. It is their responsibility to be receptive to the instructions I put before them. My responsibility is to provide the best information/instructions that will assure that all students are prepared to take on their role as a student. I hope to be a guide, not just a source of information. I will encourage them to never stop being curious, to always ask questions.

I view the role of being a teacher as a very rewarding task. Of course, all rewards come with their struggles. Educating students is my main focus. It is my job. The role of a teacher includes feeling joy when your students excels in one subject, but also feeling saddens when they struggle in another. It is my job to encourage students to have a love for learning as they see my love for them. Teachers have many responsibilities. Providing a safe environment that is not only physically safe but that is also mentally and emotionally safe as well. If the roll of a teacher was easy, everyone would do it.

When I think about the design of my curriculum; it will help every student that is in my classroom. I plan to take every lesson very serious. I will design a plan that works best for each student. My curriculum will generally be based on the interest of the children. This will increase their passion to learn. It will motivate students to speak out about the topics we will be talking about. When students have the chance to have control of the classroom, they will work harder and that ultimately reach their goals.

I will encourage families to be supportive of their children. As a teacher, I will expect families to be involved with their child's development. I will expect that my students be rewards for good actions not only in my classroom, but also at home.

As for me, I believe that students should be given a teacher that is strong, excited, supportive, dedicated, and loving. I believe students are our future and we can only make a difference if we have a positive impact on their life. Having a positive influence as a teacher will help students grow into strong adult. Strong adult can optionally change the world we live in. I will also work towards being the best educator I can be.
